Topic of the conference

New Public Management (NPM) was a real intellectual revolution according to Hood (1991) through its promotion of a new model of public governance (Osborne et al., 2010). It aimed in particular at integrating innovation, creating a closer link between public organizations and their users, or “customers”, and promoting the transformation of these organizations. Innovation is considered as the key element of good governance and promoted to cope with the bureaucratic issues. Innovation is perceived as an antidote against administration deficiencies, whereas it enables the construction of a new process and a collective capacity aiming at reducing non-desirable consequences that would otherwise result from bureaucratic problems.

Innovation has spread around the world from the private sector to governments and public service organizations. It has increasingly become a leading topic in political and administrative discourse, innovation is now widely seen as a promising driver of public service improvement (Damanpour and Schneider 2009¹; Walker 2006²).

The heated debate on the real potential of innovation within modern governments arises from the awareness that current design of public policy and implementation are likely to produce an alarming social and public value decline as well as administration shortcomings. This point is particularly relevant when considering the important role citizen trust in government plays in shaping not only accountability, but also citizen responses to innovation. All told, the complex relationship between innovative activity and public service performance, which is of great theoretical and practical interest.

This conference addresses multifaceted dimensions of innovation and governance, reflecting the diverse efforts and experiences of different societies in improving performance and accountability. Theoretical and empirical papers, particularly comparative studies across different cities either in the same or different countries, are encouraged.

Debating issues

The submitted papers should address one of the following topics and debating issues including, but not limited to:

- Sub-theme 1 Global perspectives on Innovation and Governance
- Sub-theme 2 Governance and performance management through Reform and Innovation of State and Local Authorities
- Sub-theme 3 Sustainability, ethics, responsibility and public administration
- Sub-theme 4 Collaborative governance: models, experience and challenges
- Sub-theme 5 Public-private partnerships, leadership development and strategic HRM

Papers format, key dates and publication opportunities

Participants who wish to present their research at the IPMN 2019 conference are welcome to send an extended abstract in WORD FORMAT (.doc or .docx) according to the following guidelines:

Each abstract should include

- Title of the proposed article
- Authors' information,
- Abstract text of 500 words
- Max. 5 keywords
- Paper type (Academic/Practical)
- Bibliographical references

A first draft of the abstract is due by 1st of February 2019, and must be submitted to ipmn2019@essca.fr.

By 1st of March 2019, authors will be given notice of the acceptance of the submitted abstracts, reviewed by a scientific committee member.

By 1st of June 2019, accepted full papers will be submitted by the authors, based on the suggestions from the referees.

Each full paper should include

Character	Times-News-Roman, 12
Key-words	Max. 5 items
Max. paper length	7000 words
Footnotes	Footnotes at the bottom of each page (please limit the use of footnotes)
Citations	References in the text should be cited by putting in brackets the name(s) of the author(s) and the year of the reference [e.g.: (Porter 1982)]
Bibliography	At the end of the paper, according to the following standard: Osborne S. (2016). Public management research over the decades: What are we writing about?, Public Management Review, 19, 2, p. 109-113.

All received extended abstracts will undergo a double blind peer review. To facilitate the double-blind review process, abstracts must consist of two pages: in the first one, author(s) name(s), affiliations, email address(es) and paper title are listed; the second one includes the abstract text, together with the repetition of the paper title.

At the end of the abstract, please include short biographical notes of each author.

The best papers presented at the conference could possibly be eligible for publication in one of these journals: International Management (MI), Gestion Management Public (GMP) and International Public Management Journal (IPMJ).

The editorial committee of the journal Management International (MI) considers the possibility of devoting a special report to the theme of the conference. A decision will be made and communicated to the organizers as soon as possible. If it is favourable, the best texts presented at the Conference will be submitted to the peer review process.
